Excerpts from: “Walk for Peace”

Song by Sy Long for the Monks

January 6, 2026

We rise before the daylight breaks,
Dust on our feet, hope in our hands.
Long roads stretch beyond our sight,
Yet kindness shows us where to stand.
Through towns and fields, through joy and pain,
We carry more than what we see—
Every step a quiet vow,
To walk with love, to walk as one.
When the world feels torn apart,
And hearts grow tired, afraid, and weak,
We remember why we walk—
Because peace begins with me.
Peace is not somewhere else,
Not a finish line ahead—
It lives in how we listen,
In every word we never said.
When we soften our reactions,
When we choose to understand,
The world begins to change its course
Through the kindness of our hands.
Children laugh along the road,
Elders bow with knowing eyes.
Different faiths, one shared wish—
To let suffering slowly subside.
We bless the ground beneath our feet,
And those who walk with us in spirit,
For no one walks this path alone,
When love is what we carry.
So, when the road feels long and hard,
And the world feels heavy still—
Just breathe, be kind, take one more step...
That is how we walk for peace.
